The Role of the Board

Course No 320

Participants will gain a clear and focused understanding of the key role of directors and corporate secretaries in the management and administration of the company.

Today, directors are being constantly evaluated and scrutinised by regulators and shareholders and it is therefore essential that directors appreciate the responsibility of the office, their duties, rights, obligations and the relationship with other stakeholders within the company.

Participants will also be exposed to the liability directors face in the event of a breach or non-compliance with any applicable law.

Recent judgments will also be considered. This course will also emphasise corporate governance principles, best practices and the interpretation of various provisions of the Companies Act.
