AML/CFT Risk: The BRA, CRA and JRA Explained

Course No 235

In terms of the PLMFTR, subject persons are required to identify and assess the risks of money laundering and terrorist financing their businesses are exposed to. In doing so, subject persons need to reflect these risks in their BRA, taking into consideration any risk exposure identified during the assessments of the JRA and any client risks identified in the CRA. These 3 important documents need to be linked so that a subject person can understand the risk exposures and take mitigating measures as necessary.

Supported by:

DILIGEX.

Sample Topics Covered:

The importance of the Assessment framework

The key elements of the BRA, CRA and JRA
